Hands at work

My name is David Bentley. In February 2010 I went as a volunteer with the charity Hands at Work which is a Christian non-profit organisation working in vulnerable communities across sub-Saharan Africa where HIV/AIDS, poverty and numbers of orphans are highest and support structures are very low. I left school after my GCSEs, served an apprenticeship as a motor mechanic and worked in a dealership for 5 years before deciding to go and do something a bit different! Whilst working with Hands at Work I serviced and repaired vehicles needed for access to the communities. I was also involved with building work and community work. I am in the process of fundraising so that I can go back for a further 3 years. Personal sponsorship via Milwich PCC or donation for Hands at Work would be gratefully received!
